

Activity 3.1: Threat Assessment Worksheet

Perpetrators Which, if any, key actors currently have or might plausibly develop the motive, means and opportunity to carry out large-scale, deliberate attacks on populations?
Target groups Which, if any, groups of populations are currently being targeted or might plausibly be targeted for deliberate attack?
Influential third parties Which other actors are enabling atrocities, or playing protecting or peacebuilding roles with respect to ongoing or potential mass atrocities?
Means for perpetration What resources are available to perpetrators – is there a surplus of illegal (or legal) arms flowing through the country? If the government is the perpetrator, what military resources do they have at their disposal?
Potential motives What divisions within a society may be driving one group to perpetrate crimes against another?

Opportunity for perpetration Is there a particular trigger for atrocities coming up? Are there moments in the political process that could breakdown and result in atrocities?
Early indicators of risks Are there any other early indicators of risks, such as increasing hate speech, movement of armed groups, changes in laws affecting some groups more than others or broader legal reforms restricting human rights, or increasing evidence of human rights abuses?
Unique vulnerabilities of populations based upon: ethnicity, religion, political affiliation, age, gender, other communal differences within your surroundings.

Based upon the variables above – do you think there is a risk of mass atrocity crimes? Which ones? Are there things you identified in this case that you would not have focused on prior to learning about the Framework of Analysis?